Nobody is immune. In this cognitive era, every organization must operate from a presumption that their cyber defences have been breached.

Cybercriminals have highly sophisticated tools which can be easily deployed in organizations. We know of the e-commerce market, encrypted communication channels, and online stores for goods and services on the dark web. Several point-and-click cyber weapons with various payloads can compromise individuals and networks.

The geographical location, time, and target are insignificant when the fees are paid. We are facing an array comprising State Actors, Criminals, Hackers, and Kiddies, which is challenging to differentiate.

This cyber arms race comes at a much higher cost to the defender as most of the attacker's capability is either stolen or bought to order, and the defender is not prepared to anticipate and respond to this. The traditional security controls such as Vulnerability Assessment, Penetration Testing, Policy, and Certification are no longer enough to minimize Cyber Risk.

Hence organizations need to look at Cyber resilience. Cyber resilience ensures that business operations are safeguarded and that a threat or breach does not demobilize the entire business. An organization is cyber resilient when it can defend against cyber threats, have adequate cyber risk management, and can guarantee continuity or quick recovery from cyber incidents.

Cyber resilient organizations recognize that operating safely online goes far beyond technical measures. There is a need to build a more profound understanding of Cyber risks and threats, align business risks and take appropriate steps to protect their assets and maximize its availability.
